Why Miss Allison Loves Teaching:

“I love seeing my students succeed and learn new skills. My students’ success and passion drives me.”

Miss Allison teaches piano and voice to students of all ages. Miss Allison started singing in middle school when she was convinced to join her school’s swing choir. Throughout middle and high school, Miss Allison discovered a love for performing in a variety of singing groups and found success competing in District and State Solo and Ensemble. Miss Allison pursued her love of music throughout college where she majored in Music Education at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

While in school, she was a member of the University's Concert Chorale and had the opportunity to perform with the Rolling Stones in the summer of 2015. She has since graduated with her degree in Music Education, and along with teaching at APA, is currently working as a general music and choir teacher at Starbuck Middle School in Racine. Miss Allison loves getting to know the musicians and figuring out what their strengths are.
